The "If You Give a Child a Book ..." campaign is supported by The E.W. Scripps Company (NASDAQ: SSP) and its employees, the communities it serves and Scripps family members. This campaign aims to reach underserved children by distributing free books to kids in kindergarten through third grade who are still developing their reading skills.

The Fund is committed to empowering children by providing them with the freedom to choose their reading materials. In collaboration with Scholastic Books, the Fund offers free Scholastic Book Fairs to Title I schools across the country, providing students with the power of choice to select the books they get to take home. These free book fairs occur throughout the school year, with the goal of ensuring that every student in the low-income schools they support receives 10 books annually.

"When children have access to books, they don't just get to enjoy great stories—they build connections with friends, family and their community," said Carrie High, director of philanthropic strategies for the Scripps Howard Fund. "When children are empowered to read what interests them, they develop a shared sense of belonging and understanding. Each book is a tool for connection, imagination and growth."

During the 2024-25 academic year, the "If You Give a Child a Book ..." campaign invested a record-breaking $1.5 million in childhood literacy and provided over 296,000 new books to children.
